

What's the Difference between ACHENA, CHC and NASH?

Each organization fills important and necessary roles to promote excellence within the homeopathic community.

ACHENA achena.org

Develops learning standards in homeopathic education, clinical training and continued education.

Administers and promotes voluntary school accreditation.

Advocates for an educational pathway to CHC certification and professional practice.

ACHENA promotes learning standards and competencies in the education and clinical training of professional homeopathic practitioners in North America.

CHC

homeopathicdirectory.com

Administers and maintains an entry-level competency exam.

Conducts recertification to build knowledge beyond entry level.

Maintains homeopathy profession standards developed by classical homeopathy stakeholders.

CHC certification (CCH) promotes professional recognition with established education and standards - an important step toward greater legal recognition of homeopathy.

NASH

homeopathy.org

Promotes and represents North American professional homeopaths.

Ensures professionalism and competence via Code of Ethics.

Advocates for legal environment in which professional homeopaths can practice.

NASH (RSHom (NA)) provides member benefits including a Defense Fund, professional liability coverage, product discounts and organizational participation/responsibility.